Banque de France, Dijon

Dynamic white light to enhance neoclassical architecture

LOCATION: Dijon, France

YEAR: 2017

LIGHTING DESIGNER: Vittorio Sparta - Eclar

The headquarters of the Bank of France in Dijon was illuminated with Platek products in 2017, following the guidelines of the lighting designer Vittorio Sparta and his company Eclar.

The palace, which stands in a large park, is a typical example of French neoclassical architecture. A precious geometric decoration adorns the surface of the roof, the walls are crossed by high windows with shutters painted in white and the pediment is characterized by the typical central architectural element of the tympanum.

The lighting designer has carefully selected the lighting products: Mini Corniche was used in surface mounted and recessed version, since it is a highly flexible and customizable product.

A dynamic white light was chosen as the lighting effect for this project that could elegantly highlight the representative and sophisticated architecture in its most significant elements.
